Last updated: 10.05.2010 1050 letters // 143 words

WiWi-Online is a leading information service for students, academics, higher education institutions and businesses involved in the numerous fields of economics and business administration. It represents a link between business theory and practice, with content created in close collaboration with universities, explicitly tailored to the needs of its users. WiWi-Online provides economic and business know-how such as specialist articles, economic data, and company contacts as well as extensive database-supported research options for students and young professionals. Academic staff and universities also benefit from the use of WiWi-Online as it is the ideal tool to quickly establish contact with other universities, companies or institutions, providing, for example, a database of academics in the field, an exceptionally popular search engine. WiWi-Online additionally provides an inexpensive graduate recruiting tool for companies, allowing them to specifically appeal to the next generation of economists and business leaders. www.wiwi-online.net
