

ENPC MBA is proud to announce: Baya Tuvshintugs Finalist for the MBA Student of the Year Award

July 29, 2010

Baya Tuvshintugs, ENPC School of International Management

Baya Tuvshintugs has a mission of spreading business education to people outside the business community such as nomads in Mongolia, small business owners, entrepreneurs, athletes, doctors, government officials, diplomats and whoever can benefit from it.

Specifically, she believes business tools such as change management, risk management, marketing, negotiation, and operations management can be applied in a variety of contexts to create positive behavior change in a population, build more efficient organizations with a focus on customers, and lead to a better society in general.

She hopes to inspire women and young girls to learn business skills, start their own businesses and dare to follow their passion. Her favourite saying is "the cave you are afraid of entering holds the treasure you seek."

Originally from Mongolia, Baya has studied and worked in the U.S., Denmark, France and Brazil in the last 10 years. Prior to her MBA, she worked at Johns Hopkins School of Medicine in the U.S. and Novo Nordisk, an international pharmaceutical company specializing in diabetes care.

"The Independent MBA Student of the Year Award is fast becoming established as the ultimate accolade for accredited MBA students. Each year we receive a growing number of applications from business schools all over the world and the quality of students nominated for the award never fails to impress.

In recent years we have found that MBA Student of the Year Winners have taken the initiative to capitalise on their success by getting involved in the Association's activities throughout the year, acting as ambassadors for the MBA, speaking at events and contributing to our new initiatives. This enthusiasm is a reflection of the passion, dedication and determination of these outstanding individuals to drive forward change for good." Taken from the mbaworld.com website.

Click here for more information.